The Susanna Dickinson House Art in Public Places (AIPP) project is funded through the Capital Improvement Project 'percent for art allocation' generated from the AIPP Ordinance. This AIPP project will consist of permanent public art that will function as a courtyard, connecting the Susanna Dickinson House to the neighboring O. Henry Museum and reveal the sites' historical context within early 19th century Texas. The courtyard area is intended to provide space for programs and events related to the two historic homes, O. Henry Museum and Susanna Dickinson Museum, and to Brush Square. These programs and events include the O. Henry Pun-off, poetry readings, and fundraisers for future park improvements. At the request of the Austin Parks Foundation and the Parks and Recreation Department, AIPP has agreed to expand the scope of work of the artists and accept the additional grant funds, upon Council authorization.

Artist team Hawkeye Glenn and Lizzie Martinez were selected through an open competition for visual arts and design professionals living in Austin and surrounding area within a 100 mile radius. Their selection was recommended by the Art in Public Places Panel on February 2, 2009. The Austin Arts Commission approved this selection on March 16, 2009.

Funds from the Austin Parks Foundation of $10,000 will be used to enhance the planned public art project increasing the total project cost to $30,000 for artists' design and commission.
